

With travel restrictions in place, most of the country subject to stay-at-home orders, courthouses closed and some cases stayed or delayed, in-house intellectual property lawyers may find their existing projects relating to ongoing litigation and licensing stalled.

Others, of course, are getting no break even during this pandemic. If you are among those with additional time on their hands, this is a great opportunity to finally knock out some of those long-term projects that you've been pushing to the back burner. We provide below a number of suggestions to consider that will allow you to provide value even when your normal docket of work has temporarily slowed.

Click here to read the full article on *Law360.

*Subscription-based publication

Authors

Amanda Tessar

Partner

ATessar@perkinscoie.com 303.291.2357

Explore more in

Intellectual Property Law Patent Litigation Patent Prosecution & Portfolio Counseling