

World Bank Should Add Sanctions To Curb Human Trafficking

In its Sept. 13 report titled "Groundswell Part 2: Acting on Internal Climate Migration," the World Bank Group warns that climate change could displace 216 million people by 2050. Where migration and poverty collide, those willing to exploit human suffering for personal gain see great opportunities.

Indeed, the report accurately recognizes this, noting that "migrants, especially women, can be at risk of exploitation, including sexual exploitation, human trafficking, and violations of their rights," and that governments are "trying to address ... human trafficking."

Click here to read the full article on Law360*.

*Subscription-based publication

Authors

Paul O. Hirose

Partner

PHirose@perkinscoie.com 310.788.3265