

The Role of State AGs in Cannabis Policy and Regulation: A Conversation with Austin Bernstein

State Attorneys General (AGs) play a central role in enforcing cannabis laws and protecting consumers. As legalization continues to sweep the country, the interplay between state and federal law demands particular attention. In this edition of The 411 on 420, Perkins Coie senior counsel Andrew Kline discusses the role of the State AGs with Austin Bernstein, Director of the Cannabis Project at the AG Alliance and an Assistant AG in Colorado. Austin shares background on the bipartisan nature of the AG Alliance and how private sector groups can engage with AGs on cannabis issues.

Listen to "The Role of State AGs in Cannabis Policy and Regulation: A Conversation with Austin Bernstein – Episode 16" on Spreaker.

Find us where you get your podcasts

Contributors

Andrew J. Kline

Senior Counsel

AKline@perkinscoie.com 303.291.2307

Explore more in

Cannabis Law