

On this episode of The Tech Law Hangout, host Jordan Becker is excited to welcome his colleague Troy Foster, a partner and co-chair of Perkins Coie's Emerging Companies & Venture Capital practice, to discuss the differences and similarities of venture capital and private equity. Troy provides insight on when businesses should start to consider the type of investment that will take them forward and details the key differences in structure of venture capital and private equity firms.

"In the absence of significant resources within your network to grow a business and really have it take off, you're going to need to pull down some venture capital at some point." - Troy Foster
