

Blogs

July 11, 2022

Public Chatter

Will the SEC Adopt Final Climate Disclosure Rules By This October?

A few weeks ago, the SEC released its latest Reg Flex Agenda – and it has listed its climate disclosure rulemaking proposal as one that could potentially get completed by this October! Wow!

The extended comment period just ended for that proposal – although the SEC typically will review comment letters submitted after a deadline. And the Reg Flex Agenda tends to be "aspirational" as I have blogged about many times over the years.

In my blog handicapping when the SEC's climate proposal may become final – and what it may look like when it does – I put the odds at the SEC adopting final rules during 2022 as 50/50 and I'm sticking with that ratio...

Explore more in

Corporate Law

Blog series

Public Chatter

Public Chatter provides practical guidance—and the latest developments—to those grappling with public company securities law and corporate governance issues, through content developed from an in-house perspective.

View the blog