

Getting Ready for Universal Proxy: Three Things

During our recent webcast - "Proxy Season Post-Mortem – 20 Things" - at the 11:01 mark, Allison Handy noted these tips to consider now that universal proxy is upon us:

- More companies should be thinking about proxy contests because universal proxy might reduce costs. Proxy contests won't become an overnight sensation, but we may well see an increase.
- This is a good time to think about your proxy calendar and add in items related to a proxy contest under the new rules, such as deadlines for notices from and to the activist.
- Connect with proxy solicitors or other advisors you would use in the event of a proxy contest, especially if you haven't used them in a few years. Make sure you have current contact information so you are ready to react quickly if needed.

Explore more in

Corporate Law

Blog series

Public Chatter

Public Chatter provides practical guidance—and the latest developments—to those grappling with public company securities law and corporate governance issues, through content developed from an in-house perspective.

View the blog