

One new type of shareholder proposal this proxy season relates to the transparency of a company's use of – and investment in – artificial intelligence, including how the company is managing any financial and "public welfare" risks related to AI. It has been reported that at least a half dozen companies have received this type of proposal so far.

And now Corp Fin has issued the first responses to requests made under Rule 14a-8 to exclude the proposals. In both cases, Corp Fin didn't grant the relief. The companies primarily argued that the proposals should be excluded under Rule 14a-8(i)(7) since using AI is part of a company's ordinary business. In both letters, the Staff noted that the proposals transcend ordinary business matters.

Explore more in

Corporate Law

Topics

Quick Alerts

Blog series

Public Chatter

Public Chatter provides practical guidance—and the latest developments—to those grappling with public company securities law and corporate governance issues, through content developed from an in-house perspective.

View the blog