

Another in the "newbies" series: The people that wear the corporate secretary's hat are among the most amazing people you could meet. Their wide range of skills are incredible to behold. Yet, they are among the humblest—the nicest—people around.

When you look at the incredibly wide swath of things they do—the unfathomable number of hats they wear—it's surprising they elect to stay in such a difficult job. It takes a special person to be a corporate secretary.

I will be blogging soon enough about the 21 hats that I believe a corporate secretary must wear to be successful in their job—many of them overlap a tad, but there really are 21 hats...

Explore more in

Corporate Law

Blog series

Public Chatter

Public Chatter provides practical guidance—and the latest developments—to those grappling with public company securities law and corporate governance issues, through content developed from an in-house perspective.

View the blog