

FDA Seeks Comments on Use of “Natural” in Food Labeling

On Tuesday, November 10, 2015, the United States Food and Drug Administration (FDA) announced that it will accept public information and comment on the term "natural" in the labeling of food products, including foods that are genetically modified or contain genetically modified organisms (GMOs).

- The request comes in response to a public request for clarity from the FDA over use of the term "natural."
- The agency is considering whether and how to define "natural" and what foods and production methods could be labeled "natural."
- The FDA is working with the U.S. Department of Agriculture to examine and coordinate definition of the term "natural" in meat, poultry and egg products.

This update details the background behind the request for comments and specific public information the FDA is requesting. Read the full update

Explore more in

Food & Consumer Packaged Goods Litigation Food & Beverage

Blog series

Food & Consumer Packaged Goods Litigation

Food & Consumer Packaged Goods Litigation shares timely insights into litigation developments, emerging arguments and challenges facing food and consumer packaged goods manufacturers and related industries.

View the blog