CFPB Finalizes Proposed Open Banking Rule on Personal Financial Data Rights

The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau recently finalized a rule on personal financial data rights, implementing Section 1033 of the Consumer Financial Protection Act of 2010. This marks a transformative step toward open banking in the United States.

The CFPB's rule aims to create a more consumer-centric financial ecosystem, allowing consumers greater control over their financial data and offering them the ability to switch providers seamlessly.
