

Here's the fifth of the 21 hats that the corporate secretary wears (here's the blog about the fourth hat): Being knowledgeable gives you the confidence to use persuasion when you feel that directors may be straying off course on key governance issues.

Some directors will come into the board meeting letting everyone know that they heard something different when they attended a recent board meeting for one of their other directorships.

If you know your stuff, you can help walk them through the pros and cons of various approaches on that issue in an effort to win them over to your perspective. Allow your way of handling something—and maybe it's a culture thing—to dictate a different approach than the one employed at that other company.

Explore more in

Corporate Law

Blog series

Public Chatter

Public Chatter provides practical guidance—and the latest developments—to those grappling with public company securities law and corporate governance issues, through content developed from an in-house perspective.

Subscribe ?

Visit Public Chatter Resources for Guides, Quick Alerts and Programs

View the blog